I work with variety of media such as oil, watercolour, acrylic, and textile to translate the world around me into pictorial space. The process of searching for shapes and colors of objects intrigues me. Through creating art, I express my personal truth, my personal reality. In this century, borders dividing art styles and media are broken. More often, we see integration of different art forms. We are in an exciting age of complete freedom of expression where everything is possible and this inspires me.

I create in my studio in Lethbridge, Newfoundland. I have a special place in my heart for Newfoundland. This province of Canada is exceptional; it is poetic and mystical and full of stories. The contrast of textures is very interesting; here you have rocks, waves, wood, fog, old boats, and clotheslines. I can feel the influence of the environment and this is reflected in my work.
