Artist Bio

As a child my family moved more than most. My parents were small business owners and like many Newfoundlanders during the cod moratorium we found ourselves leaving our home province in search of opportunity. From one ocean to another is where we ended up, in Vancouver Island, BC.

During my teenage years in BC I was surrounded by the beauty of the place, it's old growth forests and ocean. Much like my home province.

When I was 20 I moved back to Newfoundland where I completed a BFA and B.Ed at Memorial University. Since completing my post secondary education I have moved all across Canada working predominantly with children in the non profit sector. Not all of my work has been directly related to the arts however I had always continued my art practice and at times taught private youth art classes.

My husband and I now reside in St. John's, NL where our two daughters attend school and we are the owner/operators of a small business.
